Women Change the World. I have been in the petroleum business for thirty years, so in my not so humble opinion, the economy is being transformed by women. ... The world of technology has been slowly shifting to the dominance of the female. This has been because of the fact that they have a better mind for math, computer science and technology and also a wider perspective on things. The world has and women continue to develop faster than men. Men are still way ahead of women in most of the good things in life. ... The thing is that women ... have discovered this new field called technology. This field came up through their curiosity and quest for knowledge. Many men tend to resent the fact that women are now ahead of them in most things. ... But it's a fact that women are now a large part of the workforce. ... This has created a new world. But the problem is that no one knows what will happen when women start having babies and have families. ... Sooner or later this will stop and the world will be back where it was when men dominated. But to be on the safe side, men need to stop objectifying women. Come on ... women are in every career field in the world. ... "No one has any idea as to what the world will be like when women become the decision makers." — Isak Dinesen, the author of Out of Africa, the Nobel Prize-winning book about her life in the Congo. Hard to believe that woman could have dominated the world and are still dominating the world. there are more women than men in most of the professions and they are on top in many fields, proving women can do it all. ... Even though women have dominated most of the jobs in the past, this is slowly changing and will continue to change. There are many fields in which women work in One of the biggest fields is education. The United States today has more women in college than men. After all it has been found that women are really good at teaching kids. It was thought that only men were good at educating people, but it turns out that women are great at it. Women have made a lot of changes. From the time that children were being taught in school, it is now almost 100 percent that children are taught by women. ... The changes that happened in the world are women changing the world. They made it happen. It was women that originally
